“...make a right to the rising flame on incense, and breathe in the city...”

Shiny-but-cheap jewelry, piles and piles of dates and vendors welcoming you into their shops from their plastic chairs. Away from all the hustle, make a right to the rising flame of incense, and breathe in the city that is full of no regrets.

“...and just while you were falling
in love with the cracked paint on the walls, their time comes...”

In Mubarakiya squares, an old woman carries herself through the fair, and just while you were falling in love with the cracked paint on the walls, their time comes and a new yellow coat covers their faces the very next day.
